Christmas Lunatics Hash

We met at the Railway Inn, Newton Abbot. We, Joggles and me, Podz, were late to the party, which had already started (several already partaking the Christmas spirit!). Our arrival together with one or two others keen for a run meant that the hash, laid by Buzby, had to be started and everyone was forced out of the pub on to the short and the long.

The trail was laid with dainty little 'H's and bar a few missing dots/arrows because of the rain was a successful stomp up Wolborough Hill, back down along the river (lovely shiggie) to Tuckers Maltings circa 2.5 miles. Here we repined for further refreshment – blinkin' good it was too (def recommend). Most of us were waylaid but one hardy individual, Beefy, carried on to complete the hash [and posted the route on Strava to proveit!]. The rest of us called it a day and went off for a curry at the Eastern Eye. Marvellous.

On-on,

Podz
